

House rules on how to be a good guest.

Hello, my name's « Rover » and mine's « Kitty »

We're very proud of our owner who has brought us both up very well.

First of all, before coming to the « Le petit Jura » chalet on holiday, our owner asked how many of us could come with him as well as confirming that we had both been treated for possible parasites.

He has taught us not to jump onto sofas, not to nibble chair legs, not to scratch cushions and not to go into bedrooms where we might leave our fur on the covers, etc.

And when we go walkies around the chalet he scoops up our pooh so that when kids play and adults go for a walk they don't get mucky shoes and in that way everybody stays happy and above all we can always come back on holiday here as welcome guests.

Given that we've been brought up correctly if ever we did do something naughty (which of course hardly ever happens...) we'd tell Brigitte about it right away and in that way we'd remain good friends.

And to be on the safe side, so that everybody keeps an eye on us properly, Brigitte will give back the guarantee cheque 5 days after our departure instead of 72 hours.

But of course, given that we are so well-behaved our owner has nothing to worry about.

We love our owner.
